

'Zebra', 2017

22x28

acrylic

Zebras are fascinating animals known for their distinctive black and white striped coat. I admire them, however 'Zebra' painting has much deeper meaning that goes beyond the beauty of this animal. 2017 was one of the challenging times of my life filled with uncertainties to the extent where I started questioning my emotional strength and I didn't know how long I must wait until this "black" streak of my life switches to white. 'Zebra' painting represents life itself that consists of happy and unhappy moments. The painting reminds us that we should embrace all of it. Life is a series of ups and downs, and experiencing difficult and challenging times is a natural part of the human experience. It's a reminder that no dark season can last forever.
